Hi,

I just wanted to put in a plug for Conceptual Design E for the new middle school. I think it meets the town's needs best and the price seems worth it.

Warmly,

Rachel Weinstein

Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel was asked what message he would share with young people. He said, "I would say to young people a number of things, and I have only one minute. I would say—let them remember that there is meaning beyond absurdity. Let them be sure that every little deed counts, that every word has power, and that we do—everyone—our share to redeem the world, in spite of all its absurdities, and all the frustrations, and all the disappointment. And above all, remember that the meaning of life is to live it as if it were a work of art."
